

JAGUAR F-TYPE AT GOODWOOD

By Neville Barlow

The Jaguar F Type has joined a long list of cars that have gone up Goodwood Hill on two wheels. Jaguar Landrover has sort of become expert in doing this in recent years. The F Pace did it three years ago, followed by a Range Rover.

Stunt man Terry Grant is master of this form of motorsport, holding the record for the fastest mile, on two wheels. This time it looked like it would fall over but Terry is like a high wire acrobat. This specific model was the F Type R with 550 bhp and was the rear wheel drive model, which they stopped making in 2018. Why wasn't the all wheel drive model used? Too easy perhaps! This choice of car almost cost Terry a disaster because smoke was seen pouring out of the differential. However, the show must go on and he completed the course.

Jaguar has entered into a collaboration with BMW. Jaguar will offer assistance with BMW's electric cars, while BMW has offered to build Jaguar's larger engines.

A video has been produced showing what looks like a replacement F Type being tested at the Nurburgring track sounding not like a raucous V8 but a 4.4 litre BMW transplant that may take place in 2021.
